

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

How long is the photo shoot? The photo shoot lasts 10-15 minutes and takes place in the comfort of your hospital room.

When will my photo shoot take place? We typically photograph all babies born on their first full day at the hospital. It is also possible for your complimentary shoot to take place on the day before discharge. Generally, we do not take pictures on the day of discharge, unless there is a medical reason for the delay.

We weren't ready when the photographer visited, can the photographer come back? Yes, we are happy to check back with you once more. It is best to have the baby fed when we come back so they will be comfortable and calm during the shoot.

My husband won't get to the hospital until late in the day - can the session be done then? We can include your husband in the session if he is there at the time of the shoot, but we may not always be at the hospital until late in the day. We will try to accommodate you as much as our schedule permits.

My baby is in the NICU, can I still have a photo shoot done? Yes, let your nurse know you are interested in Bella Baby pictures and sign the consent form. The session will be done when the nurse tells us the baby is ready for pictures.

I had a photo shoot done yesterday but I'd like to have it re-done again today. Is that possible? Unfortunately, we can only do one complimentary photo-shoot. Check out our Bella Life Photography for a one hour session in your home.
